“Economics is not about goods and services, it is about the actions of living men. Its goal is not to dwell upon imaginary constructions such as equilibrium. These constructions are only tools of reasoning. The sole task of economics is analysis of the actions of men, is the analysis of processes.”

Human Action,
Ludwig von Mises

“What is taught nowadays at most of the universities under the label of economics is practically a denial of it.

The task of economics is to analyze and to search for truth.”

Human Action,
Ludwig von Mises
