UPCOMING EVENT (DETAILS AT MISES.ORG/EVENTS)
November 7, 2020 Symposium with Ron Paul in Texas

MISESINSTITUTE Symposium with Ron Paul

Thank you for your continued support which makes possible everything the Mises Institute does. Here are a few projects that need your help:

Shipping Economics in One Lesson Far and Wide

This book is the most important economics book ever written for laymen. It's both an absolute classic and a devastating attack on socialism. We need your help to get it into the hands of a new generation that desperately needs it. We printed 100,000 copies, but shipping and distribution costs money. Your donation will get this book into home schools, high schools, universities, and graduate programs. You may donate at mises.org/ship and order copies of this book at mises.org/onelesson.

Mises University Student Scholarships

Mises University students think outside of the box and want answers that the mainstream programs cannot offer. They want the sound principles of the Austrian school of economics. The pursuit of economic freedom is a mainstay of Mises University and why student scholarships are in such high demand. The scholarships are competitive, and out of the many students who apply, only the best and brightest are accepted. Students learn economics the way it should be taught. Your donation will help a deserving student attend this life-changing week-long conference. You can sponsor a Mises University student at mises.org/university.

Mises Institute Graduate School

Our Graduate Program, which launched this fall, is an educational oasis in the desert of academia. It's a true master's degree-granting graduate program based in Austrian and Misesian economics. The program challenges the statist universities and provides an alternative. Here are a few courses our students undertake while earning their degrees:

- Real monetary economics rooted in Mises and Menger, focused on the history and origins of money
- Real "macroeconomics," stressing time preference and interest, credit expansion, and fiduciary media
- Economic regulations, interventionism, and the nature of financial crises

Your donation will ensure this program is successful. You can donate at mises.org/master.
